Advancing measurement of

SARJAI Regional Workshop 2017

abortion quality, Wilton Park, England

A meeting on 'Advancing measurement of abortion quality' was held at Wilton Park, West Sussex, England from Monday 15 – Wednesday 17 May 2017. This meeting was organized by Metrics for Management, Ipas, Ibis Reproductive Health. Suchitra Dalvie, Coordinator ASAP was invited to join this meeting. The purpose of the meeting was to review frameworks for approaching abortion quality measurement and reach agreement on the aspects of abortion service provision to be measured, the domains of quality to be assessed and outcomes of interest.

We agreed that the two main domains of any such quality measurements would be clinical service checklist vs. women's expectations. We speak of post abortion contraception but what about post contraception abortion? Why do large funded programmes like FP 2020 assume that receiving contraception is the full stop?? Don't even the best contraceptives fail? What do we do to ensure that those women have a back- up service so that she does not have an unwanted pregnancy?

The Center for Reproductive Rights started its network called South Asia Reproductive Justice and Accountability (SARJAI) in 2012 to build partnership with lawyers and to develop and undertake strategic litigation aimed at addressing women's rights. Every year, they organize workshop with lawyers from Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Pakistan and Philippines.

In this year, SARJAI Regional Workshop was organized to share information on existing efforts and kick off a new round of legal advocacy efforts including evidence gathering on reproductive rights violations and legal and policy mappings, litigations, legislative and policy advocacy, and engagement with national human rights institutions.

ASAP Youth Champion and Steering Committee member Anika Binte Habib represented ASAP at the workshop, she shared the objective of our works and how the networks from Asian Countries are working collaboratively and collectively to ensure women's rights and safe abortion rights. In this session, ASAP's advocacy works was shared in detail.
